the members of the board, and it is said there was not one particle of partisan advocacy of any man for the position of president. The whole effort seems to be to do the best possible thing for the University, and every member of board seems to realize his grave responsibility.

close to their hearts is the welfare of this institution, representative of the State's great past, its pride in the present, and its hope in the future.

The Richmond alumni, as can be said of few large cities where the former students of the University are present in any great number, had no candidate. They expressly said so in resolutions adopted about a week ago, and so their interest was in the institution rather than in the man. Telephone call after call come to The Times-Dispatch office from early afternoon until midnight asking for information. The paper's correspondent at Charlottesville had been natructed to rush a bulletin the moment the board took final action, and from 2 a'clock on a message from him was momentarily expected. It came at 12:15 this mornins.

Requests came so fast as the afternoon wore on that at 5 o'clock the paper sot two bulletins from the University through the courtesy of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company. The first said former President Cleveland was in the lead. This information excited greatest in those who called. About an hour later another bulletin was received through the courtesy of the Chesapeake and Ohlo Railway Company, to the effect that the board was still in session, but had reached no results.

The majority alumni of Richmond are believed to prefer Dabney to any one save Moore, and as his name was withfrawn, the election of Dabney would probably have given them great satisfaction. The name of Dr. McBryde has been the same and the property of the courtes of the same would be a present and the property down them sare a satisfaction. The name of Dr. McBryde has been the same and the property and the p ilis work at the Virginia Polytechnic Institute has been most successful. His results in getting students have been remarkable. The ability with which he has managed affairs at Blacksburg has attracted widespread attention.

The last call for information about the election came this morning at ten minutes to 1 o'clock.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)

ASHLAND, VA., June 12.— The town public school commencement held its finals Thursday night in Randoiph-Maron lecture room, before a very large audience. The exercises were opened by prayer by Rev. Mr. Crawley, of the Presbyterian Church.

A musical programme was carried out. Several recitations by the pupils were well received. Rev. James A. Duncan made a most interesting talk on History. He took Ashland history as his theme, and during the course of his romarks he related many funny incidents of his life and the lives of others in the audience, which provoked much merriment. His talk was very interesting and was interrupted frequently by applause.

Diplomas were awarded to the following graduates by Dr. A. C. Wightman, chairman of the town school board: Brubage DeJarnette, Daniel Ellis, Winfrey Chewning, Nelda G. Gilman and W. R. Weisiger.

Golden Maxim, the odds on favorite, was second, and was declavely beatten. The Brooklyn Derby is the richest three-year-old stake run at the meeting, and four good colts faced the starter. ## A GREAT GAME OF BASE-BALL

Seventeen Innings to Decide. One Thousand Cranks Saw Two Old-Time Contests.

One thousand enthusiastic fans sat nt Broad-Street Park yesterday afternoon, and various degrees of heart disease developed. Two games were scheduled, but the second game ran into seventeen innings, and it was a great nip and tuck contest all through, with both pitchers on their metite. On hils it was a stand off on the second game, but in the first the visitors only caught two safe ones off McEvoy, while the locals landed for eight good ones on Stevens.

Both rames were vivid reminders of the old Virsinia League games, that are held in such fond remembrance by several thousand enthusiasts here, and there is no reason why the games should not be better natronized by ball cranks, for they are well played and clean.

Richmond has a splendid line-up, and with the present rate, the club will go right to the top. Manager Hicks has his men under good control, and sach one is working hard for results.

All the pitchers who figured in the rames performed splendidly, and the thousand cranks had no kick coming until the very last inning of the second game. Bigble hit for two bases and attempted to steal third. The ball was well fielded by the Soldiers, and to everybody, but Umpire Duke, it looked like a cloan out for Bigble, but he was culled safe, and then he scored the winning run on McEvoy's out to outfield.

It seemed a clear case of misjudgment, but the Soldiers did no more than make a mild kick. The visitors disclosed a fine sec of gentlemanty fellows, and not a think was done on the damond that caused any comment by the spectators.

On the 3d instant, the tiny maidens of the seventh class, arrayed in moccasins and beits of wampum, portrayed scenes from "Hiawatha." Their clear enunciation of Longfellow's rhythmic lines will long linger in the memories of their audience.

On the following evening, two short plays, "The Judgment of Paris" and the "Return of Ulysses," were presented by the young ladies of the eighth and sixth classes, respectively. The parts of Atte, Paris, Venus June and Minerva were charmingly portrayed, and the youthful players won great admiration alike for the beauty of their Grecian costumes, and for the vivacity and skill with which they played their parts.

The climax was reached on Friday evening, when the "Merchant of Venice" was performed by the ladies of the fourth class. This performance showed an astonishing versatility of histrionic power among the members of the class, each character and each scene being harmoniously rendered. The brilliant conversations of Portla the casket scenes, the meeting of old Gobbe, with his witty son, the noble court scene and the amusing episode of the rings, were all portrayed in an agreeable and even a brilliant manepisode of the rings, were all portrayed in an agreeable and even a brilliant man-
